This is what you get when your decoders use cheap glue. Their decoded message falls apart. All the letters fell straight down from where they were. Our technical staff have gone to middle school graduation parties, so we need your help. Start with columns have a single letter missing. Then work with two and three letter words, choosing letters to make sensible words. Cross out the letters you use as you go along. When you decode the message send the results to your Committee on Committees.
