I was heading out when I noticed something about your sign out front. Those three fellas—Biff, Cliff, and the other one, Griff—it looks like they've had themselves a little fun at your expense. Knocked some of the letters right off, straight down into the dirt. Now, I was thinking... and my wife, she's the one who usually handles the puzzles in our house... but maybe we could put 'em back. I figure we start with the single letters—those are the easy ones, even I can handle that. Then we look at the short words, you know, just pop in whatever feels like a real word. I'd appreciate it, really. I'd just love for those boys to see the message back up there, nice and neat. Might teach 'em a little something. Oh, and one more thing... do you happen to have a ladder?"
