"Well folks, we've got some wild weather news for you! A freaky little tornado just dropped right down on a local church billboard—blew the letters clean off and scattered 'em like confetti! Now those letters are sittin' right below their columns on the sign, and the church maintenance crew is out there doing cleanup duty. They could sure use some helping hands—start with those single letters that fell, then piece together the short words that make sense. Let's get that sign lookin' good again before the next front blows through!"
